

What makes a good photo?

There are three elements in every picture—its aesthetic value, its technical quality and its journalistic importance or story-telling ability. Great pictures combine all three elements.